

Take the Northern Lights home!

Fallen from skies, crafted by artisans...

Folklore of the Inuits explains how Northern Lights' frozen flames drop from the sky as magnificent stones. Today, these legendary gems are called labradorites. The beautiful tale of the Arctic inhabitants along with the shimmering crystal itself propelled scientists to search for answers.

A carousel of colours...

And they found more than just answers. Even a new word appeared in dictionaries: labradorescence. The term refers to the stone's mystical play of colours that is caused by its inner structures reflecting only certain colours. Walk around the pendant to see it for yourself, or have our staff demonstrate its effects!

One of a kind...

All of our labradorite pendants are artisan. Every piece of labradorite is handpicked by a craftsman, who entwines delicate metal strings around the stone, turning it into an alluring pendant. Just like a fingerprint, each labradorite creation is uniquely singular.